Ribbons of white LEDs along its 1,800-ft.-length and a double set of illuminated towers visually define Philadelphia's newest Schuylkill River Span

Currently in the planning phase is lighting by LDC for the fourth Delta Hotel in Toronto. It is part of the Southcore Financial Center, a mixed-use complex currently under construction, consisting of two office towers totaling 1.4 million sq.ft. and the 45-story, four-star Delta Hotel.

The hotel will offer 566 guest rooms, and will be linked to the two adjoining office buildings. "The Delta Toronto will give travelers what we know they want from a city hotel—convenience, connectivity, and outstanding service," said Hank Stackhouse, president and CEO of Delta Hotels and Resorts. Lighting Design Collaborative has designed the lighting for the new glass wall mural on the first floor lobby of Connolly House, created by Meg Saligman. Connolly House, located in downtown Philadelphia, helps previously homeless residents in their adjustment to new living patterns.

Saligman, a Philadelphia-based public artist with a worldwide following, is known for her collaborative process and intricate designs. The backlit, hand-fired glass mural measures 11 feet 6 inches by 6 feet seven and one-half inch, with a slate border of approximately three inches. "The Connolly family legacy of good will and community service are the themes portrayed in the images which appear to glow from within," Saligman says. The core themes of the Connolly Foundation, one of the project's sponsors—faith, vision, and courage—are
